

Grant-making news

Our Sustainable Future Committee convened a learning workshop in June to explore the implications of Brexit for the work of its grantees, as well as for other funders and third-sector organisations. There was a lively and informative discussion, led by Kath Dalmeny from Sustain.

Ways to get involved and keep informed were identified and the event also provided the opportunity for our grantees to meet each other.

Transparency and open data

We are really pleased to have joined the 360Giving open data movement. This important transparency scheme enables information on grants awarded by funders to be shared and compared more easily. The grants we have awarded since January 2017 are now published in an open, standardised format and we plan to include information on grants made in previous years. For more information see our website.

Susannah Swinton, JRCT Operations Manager said “it’s been a pleasure working with 360Giving – they are very supportive and I would encourage other funders to participate. The more grant-making information that is made available in an accessible standard format, the more useful the data as a whole becomes for grant-makers and people seeking funding”.

Committee membership

The Sustainable Future Committee is sad to say goodbye to its co-optee Katy Roelich, who has stepped down after three years’ service due to work and family commitments. Katy’s knowledge and experience have been a great help to the committee’s grant-making, and the committee will miss her insight and analysis.

We are currently looking for new co-optees for our Peace & Security and Northern Ireland committees. The deadline for applications is 9am, 21 August – further details are available on our website.
